GOVERNMENT LANDS.

Under the Homestead Act, the Minister of the Interior gives notice that: "Twelve lots have been set apart in Nuuanu Valley, in the district of Honolulu, Island of Oahu, opposite the ranch of Mr. John Wood, for the purpose of conveying the same to such persons as may wish to acquire homesteads upon which to live."

The surveys can be examined at the Interior Department. Any person of full age who wishes a lot must apply in writing to the Minister of the Interior and deposit $10. The terms upon which the said lands will be disposed of are given in detail in the form of an agreement, copies of which can be seen at the Interior Department. The more important points are as follows:

A—The applicant agrees to pay the appraised value within five years, during which time no taxes will be levied on the land.

B—He shall within one year build a dwelling house upon the land, and begin to occupy the same, and shall continue to use the same as his residence for the remainder of the term of five years.

C—He shall within two years enclose the land with a substantial fence.

D—He shall pay quarterly in advance a sum representing the quarterly interest on the purchase price at the rate of ten per cent.

E—Upon the fulfillment of all the conditions a Royal patent in fee will be granted to the purchaser.

F—The agreement is non-assignable and the land cannot be sold until all conditions are fulfilled and the lapse of five years.

G—Failure to comply with any of the conditions will work a forfeiture of the land.

ISLAND NOTES.

HONOKAA, Hawaii, Sept. 15th.
Hamakua is again quieted down, after two months of anxiety. The elections are over, and the results are beyond the expectations of the most sanguine. The votes stood as follows: W. A. Kinney, 583; J. K. Kaunamano, 164; giving Kinney a majority of 419. This was one of the most orderly and quiet elections ever held in Hamakua—not a dispute or row during the entire day. Every precaution was taken by the Deputy Sheriff and his assistants to put a stop to all liquor traffic for the day.
Mr. J. F. Brown and others are at Honokaa surveying Government land for homesteads. The natives appear to be taking a lively interest in his work, and applications are going in by the dozen for lots.

Hilo, Hawaii, Sept. 15th.

Election day at Hilo was a very quiet one. The number in town was the largest ever seen on that day. Outside the Court House yard there were a large number of special police on hand to preserve order, but there was no occasion to call on them. Notices had been posted up for several days forbidding the sale of liquor on that day and the carrying of firearms. Some one evidently in the interest of some one of the Reform party had cut the telephone wires (two of them) about two miles from Hilo, but the ever active Richards was there in a short time and had the wires in order again. The police are investigating the matter. Several cartoons appeared, one very striking by our own artist. Nawahi and Commodore Geo. C. Beckley ran well. The candidates were all serenaded at their residences by the Catholic Mission Band. The Portuguese who have voted at this election seem to feel that they can now have advantages that they have never had before, and seemed to appreciate the privileges of voting.

The brigantine Lurline, under command of Mate Matson, sailed from Hilo September 12th for San Francisco, with 604 tons sugar from Wainaku. Passengers, Dr. Thompson of Kohala, Mrs. Atkins and daughter, Mrs. S. L. Coan, Frank Smith, Mr. J. D. Blackman, wife and three sons.

There was a nice shock of earthquake in Hilo at 1:10 a. m. Monday. The old crater is said to be booming.

EILLEN.

[Eugene J. Hall.]
Down in the glen, where the cataract, foam-and flashing, Murmured in musical tones; Down where the clear sparkling waters come leaping and dashing stones; Over the gray mossy stones; Down where the shimmering sunshine was silently fitting Through the bright branches of green; Down by the beautiful brookside, by me she was sitting—
Lovely Eillean!

Blue were her eyes, dark her hair, and her lips like a cherry, White gleamed her teeth when she smiled, Graceful her form, and her features as brown as a berry, Simple her soul as a child.
Happy of heart, never sad, discontented, or spiteful, Modest in manner and mien, Always unselfish, affectionate, fond, and delightful—Charming Eillean!

Gayly the orioles sang in the branches above
me,
While, with a voice low and sweet, There by the brookside she promised forever to love me,
As I reclined at her feet.
Soft was the tremulous touch of her hand, true and tender
Her gaze, and her soul was serene, Looking from eyes with a trustful and radiant splendor—Hopeful Eillean!

* * * * *
Sadly the winter-wind through the bleak woodland is sighing, Softly the snowflakes come down; Here in the desolate gloom of the grave she is lying,
Under the leaves dead and brown.
Over the ocean her spirit is waiting to greet
me,
Far from this sorrowful scene; There in God's glorious presence again she will meet me—
Angel Eillean!

MADE OF SNAKE SKIN.

Used for Diary Covers, Albums and Purse, Scrap Books and Slippers.
[New York Mail and Express.]

In the window of a Spruce street leather store, hangs the tanned skin of a boa constrictor twelve feet long. All the markings have been carefully preserved and the scales retain their natural position.

"They are mostly used in the manufacture of purses, diary covers and the like," said the clerk in charge of the store to a reporter.
"Albums and scrap-book covers are also made of snakeskin, and sometimes slippers and even shoes. The great difficulty with it, however, is that the scales soon lose their natural appearance and get rough and furry.
A successful means has not yet been devised of making them lay flat to the skin for any considerable time."

"Is the trade in them extensive?" asked the reporter.
"Not to the present, but it promises to become an important article of trade in the near future. When it is discovered how the scales can be made to retain the position they held while the animal was alive, they will be in greater demand than even alligator skin."

"What kind of snakes are mostly used?"
"The larger species, such as pythons, or boas, but even the delicate skin of a frog can be tanned. An opera glass covered with the handsomely marked skin of a garter, or a small water snake will soon become fashionable. In cases, small books and little bedroom clocks are covered with the skin. The manufacture of which they are used. The surface of the skin is thickly glazed and in such things it takes a long time before the scales begin to stand up. The upper portion of slippers and shoes and even dressing-cases are made from the larger snakes."

"What country supplies the most reptiles for the purpose?"
"Nearly all of them come from Africa, but a good many are also obtained from Brazil and other parts of South America. It is a singular fact that the skins have to be taken to France to be tanned. The industry has not yet sufficiently developed to induce men in this country to venture into it. Only a few days ago I sold the skin of a boa sixteen feet long to the proprietor of a Parisian museum, who was not aware that we received it from Paris only a few weeks before."

Women as Criminals.

[Chicago News.]
Women are not as well constituted, physically, or mentally, as men are for committing crimes. They have never elevated murder to the rank of a "fine art." A few have succeeded as poisoners, and have acquired reputations that have extended through all countries and will probably live through all time. Women have great advantages over men in exercising the art of poisoning. It is a principal part of their duty to prepare food and drinks, to serve refreshments, and to administer medicine to the sick. All these employments afford excellent opportunities for dealing out poisons.

Women, however, though graceful in other respects, are very awkward in the employment of cutting instruments and firearms. They are also likely to overdo everything they undertake. They fire too many pistol balls into the body of a person they wish to pass off for a suicide. They should learn that one bullet carefully lodged in the heart, lungs or brain is likely to settle any heart but a very tough customer. Wasting too much ammunition is likely to excite suspicion.

Female novices in the art of poisoning rarely do a very fine job. Women are more thorough-going than men, and are likely to overdo everything they undertake until they have had considerable experience. Women have been known to administer an ounce of arsenic or a dram of prussic acid to a person whose existence they desired to terminate. This rendered detection certain.
Again, women not only give too much poison to produce the desired effect, and shoot off too many charges from a revolver, but they tell too many stories after they have concluded the enterprise. Until women can commit murder as successfully as men do, and escape conviction as skillfully, an impartial public will not be likely to acknowledge the complete equality of the sexes.

London's Fire Department.

[Exchange.]
There are in London fifty-nine fire-engine stations and 600 firemen constantly employed, besides constables and pilots. The firemen are selected from seamen whose discharges pronounce them "very good" in "character" as well as in "seamanship and ability."

An Apprentice System.

The owner of a big Providence woolen-mill, invariably hires a new boy for a term of three years at wages of $3, $5, and $6 progressively per week; but at the end of each year he makes a gift of $50 to every lad who has made satisfactory advancement in the trade. He thinks this is the best form of an apprentice system.

Growth of the Shoe Trade.

[Nashua Telegraph.] Within two years the shoe industry has taken a rapid and remarkable development in New Hampshire. Ten factories have been established and over $1,000,000 invested.
